"THE POWER OF THE CROSS" Two Reel Lubin
With ARTHUR JOHNSON

When Paul Damer entered the ministry his mother gave him a cross that had belonged to his father. Paul located at Glenwood with John Temple, a churchman. Iris a daughter and Mary her cousin were in the family. Paul fell in love with Iris, and they were married. Through the companionship of Mrs. Burton, Iris became addicted to drink. One night her father found her in a cafe. The husband forgave her. She went to live with Mrs. Burton. There she met Clifford Moore, an old sweetheart and sunk deeper in the mire of vice. Paul in his despair tore the cross from himself. One night, encountering Moore, he threatened to kill him. Leaving the gambling house Moore was killed. Circumstantial evidence pointed to Paul. He was arrested for the crime and would have been convicted, but Mary, proved an alibi. Iris died in poverty. Paul again took up the Holy work, Mary agreed to help him and returned the cross.

VANDAL IN THE SOUTH

Same Kind of Damage on Chickamauga Field as here.

The official report of depredations on the Chickamauga battlefield show damage exactly similar to that done to Gettysburg monuments. At Chickamauga but one monument was harmed, that of the 37th Regular Infantry a granite monument with a figure of a soldier in relief on one side and a bronze tablet on the other. The visor of the cap on the soldier was broken, the nose, eyes and ears badly battered and the gun held by the soldier broken off; the feet were also battered and broken. The vandal after completing his work wrote with a pencil on the face of the monument "I have done my duty." As at Gettysburg there has been no trace of the identity of the man committing the deed.

NO DAMAGE

COMPLETE COUNT OF OFFICIAL VOTE

Peter Eisenhart Democratic Nominee for Director of the Poor. Kephart Polls Large Vote for Superior Court Judge.

The official count of last Tuesday's primary election was not finished in Adams County until Monday afternoon. The returns show Peter P. Eisenhart as Democratic nominee for director of the poor, that being the only county office for which there was any contest.

An interesting feature is the comparatively large vote polled by Mr. Kephart, for judge of the Superior Court. He is little known here or generally throughout the state but, by a liberal amount of advertising, brought his name before the voters and partial returns from other counties show him likely to be one of the successful aspirants.

WENT TO CHINA

Granddaughter of the Late Rev. John Ault, of Littlestown.

The steamship Manchuria, which sailed from San Francisco on September 10, carried Miss Gertrude N. Hoy, a young woman who was born in a mission field of Japan, back to her father, the Rev. William E. Hoy, in charge of the China mission of the Reformed church at Yo Chow, China. The lady is a granddaughter of the late Rev. John Ault, formerly of Littlestown.

Miss Hoy will work as a missionary in the same field where her father and mother are now stationed. She came to America eight years ago to study. She is a graduate of Hood College, Frederick, Md., and last year taught school at Canaan, Conn. A few weeks ago she received an appointment from the board of foreign missions of the church.

WELL KNOWN YORK DRUGGIST DIES

Horace Smith, Prominent York Resident, with Many Friends and Acquaintances here, Dies in Baltimore Hospital.

Horace Smith, member of the firm of William H. Smith & Co., one of the oldest and most prominent drug concerns of York, and a brother of Mrs. W. A. Martin, of Carlisle street, died in the Union Protestant Infirmary hospital, Baltimore, Monday night at 11 o'clock.

Mr. Smith went to the hospital in Baltimore on Sunday, September 14, for an operation, and while it was looked upon as a serious one, reports from there were to the effect that he was improving until Sunday when he became decidedly worse.

Horace Smith had many friends in Gettysburg. He was aged almost fifty-six years. He was the son of William and Mary Elizabeth Smith and was born in York October 3, 1857. Educated in the York High school, York County Academy and Collegiate Institute, he entered the drug store established by his father, and which still bears his name, at the age of fifteen, and became a member of the firm in 1879, and assisted in conducting the business with Geoffrey P. Yost up to the time of his death.

Mr. Smith was married to Margaret, a daughter of the late Jacob D. Schall, one of the most prominent families in York, and she and two children, John Schall and Catharine Dorothy, wife of Lewis Mayer, survive.

He was a member of St. Paul's Lutheran church, where he was a deacon for many years, and was as popular in church affairs as he was in business and secret circles.

ORPHANAGE MEETING

Hoffman Orphanage Directors Plan to Reduce Debt.

An adjourned meeting of the directors of the Hoffman Orphanage was held on Monday in Hanover. In the annual report to the Synod it was shown that the home was in a flourishing condition and the debt which was $8,000 one year ago has since been cut down to $6,000.

The special business of the meeting was to prepare for the organization of a ladies auxiliary in the Synod to aid and help further the plans which are on foot to reduce the debt in the coming year and, have it entirely wiped out as soon as possible.

The directors are, Rev. Dr. T. J. Barkley, Gettysburg; Rev. Dr. C. S. Slagle, Westminster; Rev. A. S. Dechant, Hanover; Rev. A. M. Gluck, Martinsburg, W. Va.; Rev. Dr. F. S. Lindeman, Littlestown; Dr. Gerber, York; Charles S. Duncan, Esq., Gettysburg; J. Gilbert, Westminster, Md.; Messrs. Maus and Cadover, of near Littlestown.

THE MANHATTAN PLAYERS

Large Audience Grets the Manhattan Players on Opening Night.

Last night the Manhattan Players appeared in a new comedy drama at Walter's Theatre. The play evoked considerable interest in the large audience present. The company is exceedingly strong for a repertoire organization, and is capable of playing any piece in the repertoire. Some of the best known members in the cast are Ralph DeHaven, Alice Whitney, W. James Bedell, Ralph Hirst, Harvey Denton, John Bliss, Miss Lois Worden, Dorothy Burres and the Sisters Russell. The company opened with a fine production of "A Thief In the Night" and the manner in which the play was mounted and acted would have given credit to an attraction charging higher prices. Pleasing specialties are introduced between the acts, and the feature vaudeville of the evening is the Russell Sisters in their electric spectacular dancing novelty. To-night the company will present the fascinating comedy entitled "For Love and Honor" and on Wednesday night they will present the beautiful Irish comedy "Karney Killarney". A matinee will be given Saturday.—advertisement

Walking at Billiards.

"I figure out," said one of the billiard experts playing in the championship games, "that I walk three miles when I play 400 points. Of course, sometimes I do less than that, provided my average runs by nursing are larger. When I can keep the balls closely together for a good run, that lessens the distance I have to walk."

This cue artist said he once made 100 points and did not circle the table half a dozen times. More amazing still was the assertion that he had seen the late Jacob Schaefer run 150 points without going even once entirely around the table.

Almond Jumbles.

Three cups of soft sugar, two cups of flour, half a cup of butter, one teaspoonful of lipped pan; five eggs well beaten, two tablespoons of rose water, three-quarters of a pound of almonds blanched and chopped very fine and one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in boiling water.

Cream the butter and sugar; stir in the beaten yolks, milk, flour, rose water, almonds and, lastly, the beaten whites, very lightly and quickly. Drop in rings on buttered paper and bake at once.

About Crepe Walnuts.

When a crepe walnut becomes soiled the best way to wash it is to use a very thin starch and then hang it up to dry on a coathanger. Do not wring it, as this makes the starch uneven. If washed and dried in this manner, crepe will look very well.

Rhubarb Shortcake.

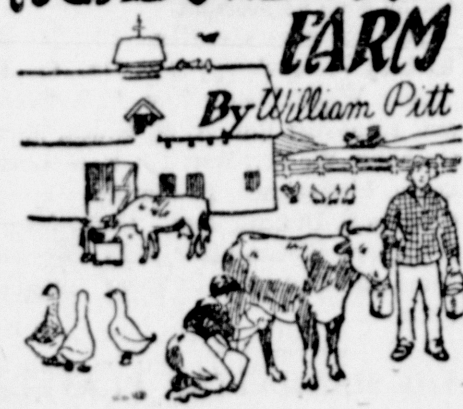

Make a rich biscuit dough and bake in a shallow pudding or baking pan; while hot, split open, butter and spread each half with well sweetened rhubarb sauce, lay the halves, one on the other, and serve with whipped cream.

Century Salad.

Use crisp white lettuce leaves, sliced, red pepper and chopped olives, with a few slices of cucumbers. Pour over it a French dressing of mayonnaise.

According to Professor S. J. Hunter of Kansas, the best way to get rid of grasshoppers in the alfalfa fields is by the use of the disk harrow. Professor Hunter has been carrying on experiments for several years to eliminate the destructive hoppers and from the results of those experiments he has learned that disk is not only fatal to the grasshopper, but that it also greatly increases the yield of alfalfa.

NOTES FROM MEADOWBROOK FARM

Ventilate all stables.

Cull all pure bred animals.

Keep the little pigs growing.

Provide the chicks with shade.

Pasteurization is universal in German cities.

Wash the calves' pails as well as the milk pails.

Corn silage produces a very rapid finish on the cattle.

Equal parts of lard and kerosene is effective against lice.

Alfalfa not only furnishes protein or flesh-making material, which is deficient in corn, but it tends to offset the heavy character of a ration consisting of corn alone.

Hog raisers differ as to which is the best breed but, as an experienced breeder said recently, it makes little difference provided we have a good foundation to start with.

Peck baskets of the climax type are very attractive and popular on some markets. When the market becomes glutted with tomatoes packed in large baskets it is especially advantageous to use peck baskets.

When you hang a lantern up in the barn, fasten it so that it cannot be knocked down. Sometimes we put them where they will fall if we by accident rise and hit them with our heads. And then—well, then there is trouble, and maybe the barn is not insured, either.

SULZER LOSES PLEA TO DROP CASE

Court of Impeachment Dismisses Motion.

ONLY ONE VOTE FOR IT

Judge Parker Argued Against Plea That the Governor Was Unconstitutionally Brought to Trial.

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 23.—The motion of counsel for Governor Sulzer to dismiss the impeachment proceedings brought against him was overruled by the high court of impeachment. All members of the court except Senator Wende, of Buffalo, a Democrat, voted against the motion. Governor Sulzer's legal artillery resumed action when the court of high impeachment, which began last week his trial for alleged high crimes and misdemeanors, was called to order by presiding Judge Cullen. Attorney Louis J. Marshall continued the argument which he did not finish when the court adjourned on Friday, in which he held that the governor was constitutionally impeached.

Mr. Marshall quoted precedent in support of his contention that the assembly in extra session was entitled to consider only subjects called to its attention by the governor. He said on this point:

"Whenever an extraordinary session has been held, not even an appropriation bill to cover expenses of the session has been attempted to be passed, except upon the specific recommendation of the governor. There is not to be found in the history of any of the states a single instance of the institution of impeachment proceedings at an extraordinary session of the legislature."

Answering the argument that the assembly exercised not a legislative but a judicial function, Mr. Marshall held that an impeachment was equivalent to an indictment, and that the assembly exercised no other function than that of a grand jury. Continuing, he said:

"When a grand jury finds an indictment, it does not act judicially any more than in those jurisdictions where informations have taken the place of indictments, the filing of an information by a district or state attorney can be said to be a judicial act."

"It will doubtless be argued that, under our interpretation, the governor could not be impeached except at a regular session of the legislature, since it would be unnatural for him to recommend to the legislature at an extraordinary session the consideration of the subject of his impeachment."

Judge Parker, on behalf of the assembly board of managers, replied to Attorney Marshall.

In answer to the first contention of the defense, that the assembly had no power to institute the impeachment proceedings, he said:

"Such impeachment is not, in any sense, a legislative, but a judicial subject and proceeding. It is not an act of a legislative body. It is not an expression of legislative will. It is in no sense a rule or guide, after the manner of a legislative act, for the control of future conduct, but a complaint, an accusation and calling to account by a quasi judicial tribunal, of a person for past misconduct. It is of the precise nature of a proceeding by a grand jury in the finding of an indictment. Nor is there any more connection or relation between an impeachment by the assembly and a session of the legislature than there is between such session and the ordinary proceeding of a grand jury in the finding of an indictment."

"The legislature, whether assembled under constitutional provision or by call of the governor, has no power of impeachment. The sole power to institute the proceeding is vested in, and belongs to the assembly exclusively and alone, a body entirely separate and apart from the legislature as a whole."

"The governor has nothing whatever to do with the subject of impeachment. The sole power of impeachment is vested in and belongs to that body or tribunal called the assembly. And this without any limitation or restraint whatever as to the time, circumstance or place, whether at a session of the legislature or otherwise, except the bare condition that, impeachment shall be by vote of the majority of the members of the assembly elected."

Bryan Educating Youths.
Washington, Sept. 23.—Defending Secretary Bryan's lecture tour, Senator Martine, of New Jersey, told the senate that some of Bryan's "fixed charges" were the education of several young men. "A few years ago Mr. Bryan was maintaining and educating two boys from Japan," declared Martine, "and today I believe he is educating three or four young men."

No other senator continued the subject, and Martine's speech did not reveal who were Bryan's proteges.

40 Per Cent More to Rear Children.
Chicago, Sept. 23.—The cost of rearing children has advanced 40 per cent within the last ten years, according to the annual report of the Chicago Nursery and Half-Orphan Asylum. The statement shows $101 would maintain a child a year from 1894 to 1903. From 1904 to the present this cost increased to $140. From 1874 to 1883 the institution kept children at an annual cost of $50.

PAY LAST TRIBUTE TO MAYOR GAYNOR

Large Procession Escorts Body to the Cemetery.

New York, Sept. 23.—New York paid its last tribute to the late Mayor William J. Gaynor.

The funeral ceremonies, which came to a close with interment in Greenwood cemetery, have been the most impressive ever accorded any man in New York city.

Thousands of men and women, most of them showing traces of sincere grief, lined Broadway and adjacent streets between the city hall and Trinity church, where the main services were conducted. An overflow service was held in St. Paul's church.

Details of mounted policemen preceded and followed the catafalque as it moved slowly down Broadway. At the head of each of the sixteen horses drawing the hearse marched a policeman or a fireman. There were eight members of the police department and an equal number from the fire department.

An army of citizens, many thousands strong—greater in number than the throng which had gazed on the body as it lay in state Sunday—blackened the sidewalk from curb to building line as the funeral train crept along the ten blocks of lower Broadway from the city hall to the church.

As the casket passed between the two walls of spectators every man bared his head.

The twelve honorary pall-bearers, headed by Mr. Taft, marched six on each side of the casket. Behind them came official committees of the city, two companies of the city hall police and the long train of organizations and individuals chosen from the many who applied for places in the funeral train. More than 50,000 had wanted to be in line, but in accord with Mrs. Gaynor's wishes for as simple services as possible, less than half the number were permitted to participate.

Admission to the church was by card only. The clergymen selected to officiate were Rev. William T. Manning, rector of Trinity; Bishop David H. Greer and Bishop C. S. Burch.

After halting at the church while the body was taken from the catafalque to the casket on the shoulders of six firemen and six policemen, the funeral train marched to the Battery, turning back and standing still till the end of the church services. Then the march was resumed to Greenwood cemetery in Brooklyn.

Glass Cutter Comes Home to Find Baby in Tub.

Monaca, Pa., Sept. 23.—When Carl Hirsch, a glass cutter, entered his home for luncheon, he discovered the body of his infant son in the bathtub and his mother, Mrs. Ida Hirsch, hanging to a beam in the cellar.

The woman had drowned the child and then committed suicide. It is supposed that the deed was committed in a fit of insanity.

Girl Autoist Kills Man.

Phillipsburg, N. J., Sept. 23.—An automobile, driven by Miss Emma Scalla, daughter of Frank Scalla, proprietor of Scalla Park, Washington, N. J., ran down and killed an unidentified foreigner. The accident occurred at New Village. The man's neck was broken.

4 KILLED, 20 HURT IN POWDER BLAST

HUNDREDS FLEE HOMES

Explosion at Dupont Powder Plant at Gibbstown, N. J., Causes Panic in Nearby Towns.

Camden, N. J., Sept. 23.—Four men were killed and twenty were injured through an explosion in the mixing house at the Gibbstown, N. J., plant of the Dupont Powder company.

The detonation shook Gibbstown, which is sixteen miles below Camden, was severely felt in the latter city and only slightly less in South Philadelphia and the river side of Delaware county.

The list of dead follows: Harry Van-neman, married, of Paulsboro; Hiram Feldman, single, of Gibbstown; Stephen Damian, of Paulsboro; Michael Gluffund, of Paulsboro.

Frank Pastime, another workman, was so badly injured that he is likely to die.

So terrific was the explosion, the cause of which has not been determined, that windows in houses for fifteen miles around Gibbstown were shattered, dishes shaken from tables and dressers and pictures from off the walls.

In Philadelphia, in the down town section, which is built over a strata of rock that extends across New Jersey, beneath the Delaware river and thence through Delaware county—the shock was almost as severely felt. At the Philadelphia navy yard the concussion caused the heavy compartment doors in several of the battlements to close.

The four men killed were literally blown to pieces. The largest part of any of the bodies found was a foot, which was found upon the roof of the drying house, a quarter of a mile away from the scene of the explosion. A man's hand was found a half mile away in the middle of the road. Pieces of bodies were found in trees several hundred yards about the plant.

Three of the men killed were inside the building, which was directly east of the main office, where about fifty persons were working. A clerk was looking out of the window at the time of the explosion, and saw Frank Pastime walking towards the building, and Hiram Feldman wheeling a barrel of oil into the mixing house.

Suddenly he saw the building rise into the air with a terrific report and saw a cloud of dust. The clerk was knocked across the room and out of a window. He fell unconscious.

The mixing building, which was about 30 feet wide and 100 feet long, was barricaded on three sides by earth and timber, placed there so in case of an explosion the other buildings would not catch fire.

When the explosion came the fire whistle was sounded to warn the other employees to leave the buildings. This was unnecessary, as all the employees ran to the gate when the explosion came, fearing another building might catch fire or explode.

The greatest excitement prevailed in Paulsboro and Gibbstown when the residents heard the explosion. People ran into the streets and congregated on the corners. Several horses attached to delivery wagons ran away.

Some one turned in a fire alarm. The physicians of the two towns jumped into their carriages or motors and drove to the scene of the accident. Several women became hysterical and fainted. One woman fainted in the middle of the street directly in front of a runaway team. She was dragged to safety by a fifteen-year-old boy.

U. S. SOLDIER AN IRISH BARON

Dublin, Sept. 23.—By the death of Baron de Freyne a private soldier in the United States army becomes an Irish baron and the possessor of 30,000 acres of Irish land.

Arthur Reginald French, son of Baron de Freyne by his first wife, left the British army to go to America, where he enlisted in the Eighth Infantry regiment. The baron, who was fifty-eight years old, died after a long illness.

Would-Be Suicide Too Short.

Pottsville, Pa., Sept. 23.—Phillip Hoffman, a business man of Tremont, attempted to end his life at home. He retired, placed a gun muzzle to his chest and touched the trigger with his toe. The ball tore into his chest, missing the heart by a few inches. Because of his small stature his reach was short, and it is believed that in the effort to pull the trigger Hoffman's body recoiled a bit backward, causing the ball to miss its mark. The motive is given as despondency. He has a chance to recover.

Children Drowned in Rainwater Barrel.
Marmarth, N. D., Sept. 23.—Laughing at their reflections in a barrel of rainwater, two small daughters of Mrs. Herman Ostrander lost their balance. Heads down and arms entwined, the bodies were found by the mother.

KNOWN ONLY TO GUIDES

PRESIDENT'S ROOM IN CAPITOL IS LEAST USED.

One of the Most Ornately Decorated Chambers in the Senate Wing of the Great Building at Washington—Needs Little Attention.

President Wilson visiting congress in its home on Capitol Hill, in order to keep in close touch with the law-makers of the nation, has shifted one of the least known rooms in the United States capital.

The room is one of the most ornate in the great building and is known as the "President's room." Up to this time it has been the least used of all the rooms in the big structure. Indeed, in a sense, the room may be said to have been known only to guides and the tourists that they daily pilot through the mazes of the marble pile. The mere fact that the president's name is borne by this room has long made it a magnet for the average sightseer and the guides have learned by long experience to include it in the itinerary of every personally conducted tour of the building.

But the men who work in the capitol seldom go near this "show place," and some of them might actually be puzzled for the moment to direct you to it, if your inquiry caught them unaware. This room for the president hasn't even needed attention from the painters and decorators as has most of the other rooms. Perhaps it is because it has been so little used; but aside from an occasional "touching up" here and there very little has been done for the maintenance of this room since the civil war. As for actual use by the president that has been so rare as to almost rob the room of the right to the use of the name. If a chief executive were to come to the capitol on the occasion of any great ceremonial he might be expected to tarry in the president's room until time to enter the legislative hall, but such a visit is of rare occurrence.

Similarly, on the last day of a session of congress the president may go to the capitol in order to sign the bills as they come from the legislative hopper, but this involves occupancy of the room for only a few hours each year. It may be pointed out that a bill passed by congress within ten days of the time of adjournment fails to become a law unless the president signs it before the session closes. It is said at the capitol that, with the exception of Grover Cleveland, every president since the time of Andrew Jackson has repaired to the capitol to thus facilitate the disposition of the legislative business in the final hours.

The president's room is one of the most ornate in the historic edifice. It is located in the senate wing of the capitol, at the west end of the private lobby which is directly north of the senate chamber proper and is generally considered the most beautifully decorated room in the building. The whole ornamentation of the room is the work of Brumidi, the Italian artist, who did so much of the more pretentious decoration in the capitol.

Conspicuous among the paintings in the president's room are splendid medallion portraits of President George Washington and the prominent members of his cabinet—Thomas Jefferson, secretary of state; Henry Knox, secretary of war; Alexander Hamilton, secretary of the treasury; Edmund Randolph, attorney general, and Samuel Osgood, postmaster general. President Wilson, when he occupies this room, will be face to face with the portrait of Jefferson, for whom he has great admiration as the founder of the Democratic party, and from the fact that his birthplace in Virginia is distant only a few miles from the home and tomb of Jefferson at Monticello, and that he, as a young man, attended the university which was founded by Jefferson and which was his especial pride.

In the four corners of the president's room are frescoes of four famous men, each of whom has been chosen as representative of a force in civilization. Christopher Columbus typifies discovery. Americus Vesputius signifies exploration, Benjamin Franklin suggests history and William Brewster, elder of Plymouth colony, is representative of religion. Carrying the same idea further four groups in fresco beautify the ceiling; to the north religion, to the east executive authority, to the south liberty and to the west legislation. The intricate mosaic of the floor is quite as ornate in its way as is the decorations of walls and ceilings and there is a massive chandelier that completes the effect.

Natural Results.

"Why that one more than others?"

"Because it oughtn't to be difficult to pump it."

"There is a story in that woman's face."

"Yes; and she made it up, too."

Mr. Lawver appreciates greatly the help given by firemen and citizens in general.

SIREN SENTENCED TO SIBERIA

After Wedding Sixteen Men and Robbing Them Woman Was Convicted and Deported.

St. Petersburg.—After causing innumerable men to fall in love with her—actually marrying 16 of the more impressionable and richer ones—Tatiana Butcherik has just been exiled for life to Siberia.

The woman, who is now more than forty years old, retains her remarkable beauty to a surprising degree. She married at the age of sixteen and lived with her husband about three years.

Becoming a widow, she soon wedded a rich land owner and compelled him to spend large sums upon her. When he was nearly ruined she left him, but remembered to take all his valuables with her.

The next "husband" was a stock broker, who quickly fell captive to the fair Tatiana. Having induced him to transfer all his property to her the adventurous beauty sold it and escaped abroad with a lieutenant, whom, however, she quickly deserted in order to wed a fascinated Oriental consul.

Seizing all the consul's realizable possessions, his "wife" left him poste haste and returned to Russia by means of a stolen passport. Here she was wooed and won by an important official. Again she left her latest "husband," after abstracting all portable valuables, but this time she was caught and exiled to Siberia.

It now seemed as though her career had received an effective check, but the chief jailer in the far eastern wastes soon came under the spell of the beautiful Tatiana and fled with her to Constantinople.

Here, however, the woman chanced to encounter her former "husband," the Oriental consul, and, with a justified dread of complications, she suddenly left the chief jailer and returned to Russia.

For two years she lived peacefully in Russia, and enjoyed a considerable private income, having realized excellently upon her various "husbands' valuables. Also she made a great number of other eligible temporarily happy by "marrying" them.

In this varied path of life she continued until her sixteenth victim, a lawyer, became wedded to her. The union proved peaceful and happy; there was a child. But, at a ball in a small town she came face to face with a former "husband" who, despite her entreaties, informed the man whom she genuinely loved.

The latter instituted proceedings, and the police then discovered that the woman was a former convict.

ORIGIN OF RED MAN

Attempts Made to Prove He Came From Siberia.

Explorations Show That the American Indian Is Like the Yellow-Brown Inhabitant of Asia and Polynesia.

A problem of much interest, and of late a good deal before the public, is that of the origin of the American aborigine, in other words, the native Indian. In this connection the recent investigations of Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, curator of physical anthropology, National museum, tend to prove that the native American immigrated to this country in a postglacial period, and is a representative of the overflow from northeastern Siberia, where he is closely related both mentally and physically to the yellow-brown peoples of Asia and Polynesia, says the Scientific American.

Among the interesting sites explored by Dr. Hrdlicka are the burial mounds, or "kourgans," as they are called, located on the banks of the Yenisei and Selenga rivers and their tributaries, and along the streams of northern Mongolia, especially on the banks of the Kerulen.

Oddly enough the date of the mounds is established quite as readily as if the date of construction were carved on a stone, for the different objects uncovered, be they gold, copper, iron, bronze or stone, identify the origin of the particular mound from which they came as falling within definite time limits. Most of the "kourgans" appear to represent nearly recent times, corresponding to Ugrian or Turk or "Tartar" elements, as well as modern Mongolian. The skulls of the skeletons taken from these more recent mounds are of the brachycephalic type, short, somewhat spherical skulls, which occasionally closely resemble the same form of American crania, but the "kourgans" of earlier date, containing no mental objects, yield skulls resembling the dolichocephalic type, long and narrow, and much like American Indian skulls of this type.

It is difficult to assert to just what race the older skeletons and skulls belong, and yet, on the banks of the lower Yenisei river, and in several other localities, living dolichocephalic types are not unusual, and such natives frequently bear a strong physical resemblance to our native Indians. Further burial spots are known to be located in caverns among the mountains bordering the Yenisei river, which, however, Dr. Hrdlicka was not able to investigate.

The most important part of the exploration and study was that pertaining to the living descendants of the old races. Among these people the investigator was fortunate enough to come into contact with representatives of many tribes from the banks of the Yenisei and Abacan rivers; also Huriats, Mongolians, Tibetans, Chinese and some Manchurians. He was happily present at a great religious ceremony at the Lamaist monasteries in the neighborhood of Urga, where 7,000 Mongolians from all parts of the country were in attendance.

Among all these tribes and clans there were individuals who apparently represent the older population, pre-Mongolian and pre-Chinese, and who belong partly to the brachycephalic type, though in a smaller extent to the dolichocephalic type. These men and women are practically identical with the American Indians of similar head form. The particular individuals are brown in color, with straight black hair, dark brown eyes and facial and bodily features which are strikingly like those of the native American. The men are practically beardless. Some of these people, if dressed in the costumes and regalia of an Indian, and placed among them, could not be distinguished from them. At least Dr. Hrdlicka states that there are no means at the disposal of the anthropologist by which to make such a distinction. It is not only in outward appearance that these natives of Siberia resemble the Indians, but mentally as well, and in numerous habits and customs which different environment and time seem not to have effaced.

Baby Famine in Berlin.

The Kaiser's capital is threatened with a baby famine. The shop windows display almost in the nature of a public warning a book, just issued, under the title of "Sterile Berlin," which reveals the disquieting fact that children are constantly becoming less and less fashionable among the dwellers of the imperial capital.

The author, Dr. Felix Shellhaber, says that conditions in Berlin are already practically on the same level as those which the world has hitherto associated exclusively with Paris.

He mainly blames the increased cost of living.

Found on the Moor.

Dear, quiet Aunt Mary had gone up from London to visit a golfing family of nephews and nieces. At tea the first afternoon some one managed to stop talking long enough to ask:

"Well, Aunt Mary, and how did you spend the morning?"

"Oh, I went for a walk on the moor. A good many people seemed to be about, and some of them called out to me in a most eccentric manner. But I didn't take any notice of them. And, oh, my dear, I found such a number of curious little round things! I brought them home to ask you what they are."

Hereupon Aunt Mary opened her workbag and produced 24 golf balls.

JAKE DAUBERT

The big surprise in the National league this season has been the spurt made by the Brooklyn team. Much of the success achieved by the Dodgers has been due to the hard hitting and excellent fielding of Jake Daubert, the big left-handed first baseman.

Christy Mathewson pitches in nearly rounded periods.

The Naps refuse to give up the fight for the American league flag.

Extra inning games are fought harder for the Cubs than the regulation contests.

Larry Doyle has perfected himself in the trick of touching runners on their way to second and then throwing to first to double up the runners.

Eppa Rixey of the Phillies is said to be one of the best feeders in the National league. He generally grabs the side dishes of his teammates unless he is watched.

Mike Kelly has found the job of winning a pennant with the Indianapolis team an impossible one. He has announced his determination to reorganize and get a complete new outfit.

Connie Mack did the American league a big favor by allowing Joe Jackson to go to Cleveland. With the great slugger on the Athletic team the race would be one-sided.

SPORTING WORLD

Cy Falkenberg is the real "come back" of the 1913 season.

San Francisco is likely to appoint physical instructors to the high schools there.

Williams, Wesleyan, Colgate and Union colleges have formed a basketball league for next year.

A dispatch from Sydney states that Richard Armit, ex-professional sculling champion, has decided to retire.

Willie Schaeffer had the better of Eddie Neering in a ten-round bout in the Riverside arena at Dubuque.

The $10,000 pacing stake at Lewistown, Me., fell flat. This is the little too much money for the half-milers to ante.

Louis Deponthieu, champion of France, shaded Ollie Kirke of St. Louis in a ten-round boxing bout at Binghampton, N. Y.

Harry Payne Whitney's Whisk Broom II. finished under the wire a winner in the Metropolitan handicap at the Belmont Park racetrack.

The Cornell university crew, rowing in best Courtney form, literally rowed away from the Harvard varsity in the feature event of the big Cayuga lake regatta, and crossed the line full six lengths to the good.

Seventeen-year-old Philip Johnson, of Portland, Me., will be a member of the all-star United States rifle team, which will compete against Great Britain and Australia in the international small-bore matches.

Georges Carpenter, French heavy weight pugilist, won the heavy weight championship of Europe by knocking out Bombadier Wells, the British champion, in the fourth round of a fight at Ghent, Belgium.

Hans Helmer, the American professional Marathon runner, is trying the middle distance game. He won the final in the big half-mile handicap at the Powderhall grounds, Edinburgh, Scotland.

An Opened Grave

By SAMUEL R. BRANT

My father was one of the Argonauts, or forty-niners, as they were called. He told me this story when I was a little boy:

"I was washing for gold the same as others," he said, "and Jim Barlow, a young fellow about my age, was washing alongside of me. A storm was coming up, and we were concluding it was about time to get under cover when all of a sudden I saw Jim pitch forward on his face. At the same time I was blinded by a flash and heard a terrible clap of thunder. When we picked Jim up he was dead."

"That was before the present methods of bringing persons to life as they sometimes do now, and no one had ever heard of a person receiving a dose of electricity strong enough to kill, and yet in a few hours be perfectly well again. None of us saw any use holding on to Jim's body for any length of time. He had been killed by lightning and that's all there was about it. So we set one of the gold washers, who was a carpenter by trade, to make a coffin or, rather, a box, and we buried him under a big tree that stood apart from other trees."

"I washed gold up and down the creek for some time when one of those earthquakes they have in the Golden State came along and left great fissures in its track. A few days after the occurrence I was passing the place where Jim Barlow was struck by lightning. One of the fissures that had been left by the quake ran right along the foot of the tree and there was the end of his coffin sticking out on one side of the cleft dirt."

"I didn't propose to leave the body of a friend in that condition, so I dug out the coffin, intending to rebury it. Either the quake or something had loosened the lid, and I raised it. The coffin was empty."

"I never had such a surprise in my life. The lid had been nailed on—we hadn't any screws at the time of the burial. The nailing had been so carelessly done that several nails had missed striking the box or had gone through sideways. If Jim had come to life it would have been easy enough for him to have kicked off the lid. But I questioned if he could have broken through the ground above him, though we hadn't taken pains to dig the grave very deep, also the long storm which followed the burial must have washed a good deal of ground off the surface."

"But all this was of no importance. Jim had been killed, and a few hours afterward had been buried. It was getting dark when we planted him, and the next morning we had all gone to work further up the creek. Being dead, what had become of the body? There was no medical college west of the Rocky mountains, and no one had any use so far as I can see for the corpse."

"Such mysteries don't interest a busy people such as we were out there at that time, and I didn't spend much time trying to solve the puzzle. I got tired of placer mining and, going to a different location, staked out a claim."

"There was a trail leading by my mine, and one day, when I was sitting on a log resting, with a pipe in my mouth, I heard some animal coming up the gulch. In a few minutes I saw a horse with a man on it coming lickety-split. Horse and man dashed past me, the man staring at me wildly, and you'd better believe I stared at him. His face was white as that of a corpse, his eyes were starting out of his head, and—he was Jim Barlow."

"At first I was too paralyzed to move, and when I came to myself he had passed out of hearing. I listened and thought I heard the hoofs of horses down the gulch, but nothing showed up, and soon I heard them no more."

"I never was much given to being afraid, but the sight of Barlow, who had been killed standing beside me, then shaken up by an earthquake and tipped out of his coffin, dashing past me like that unnerved me. My teeth chattered so that I bit off the stem of my pipe. What did it mean?"

"As soon as I recovered from the shock I concluded to go down the gulch and try to find out if any one else had seen the ghost. I found a man who had seen it. He described the sight just as I had seen it. He also told me that there had been considerable excitement thereabout on account of the escape of a horse thief. He was to have been hanged and got away."

"This would have explained the matter, if it hadn't been that the man I saw was Jim Barlow, and Jim Barlow was dead."

"About a week after this a man came to my cabin and said a friend of mine wanted me to come down to L. I went with the messenger, who took me to the sheriff, who had a horse thief in limbo. The horse thief was Jim Barlow."

"Why, Jim," I shouted, "I thought you were dead!"

"I ain't dead, he said, 'and I ain't a horse thief. These fellows have got me mixed with another man.'"

"I vouched for him, and they let him go. He told me that some time after he had been struck by lightning—he didn't know how long—he had dreamed he was suffocating. Raising a leg, he kicked off the lid of his coffin and a foot of wet dirt besides. He was so terror-stricken that he didn't stop running till he had put miles between him and his grave. He wouldn't have gone back to its location for the world."

FASHIONS FROM VARIOUS ANGLES

Suit Question Is the Most Difficult Problem of the Season for Women.

SILK DRESS ALWAYS NEEDED

Admirable Little Gown of Taupe Silk Is Shown in the Illustration—The Combination Gown Has Many Advantages.

New York.—The suit question is the most difficult problem of the season, because severely tailored modes are rivaled by the demi-tailored suits that are quite dressy. Heretofore you felt perfectly satisfied if you got a plain tailored suit of serge, or another lightweight cloth, for you know that it would be in good style for utility and semi-dress wear throughout the spring and summer. But this is not so this season, for you realize that a silk suit is absolutely necessary for demi-dress occasions, and that a cloth suit is needed for morning and traveling wear. In other words, you are confronted with the necessity of getting two suits! Probably this may seem like extravagance, if you don't stop to consider that a silk dress is always needed in the spring, and that if you can get a coat with it, you will have a suit as well as a dress.

Combination Gown.
If you anticipate many social affairs that require an afternoon gown, or if you expect to go abroad and intend to look in upon the races, you will find it an economy to get two such costumes—a combination suit, with an old gold crepe de chine skirt (fashioned in a "peg top" or draped style), with bodice of natural color flit and meshin laces and gold embroidery, finished with a girdle of Nattier blue silk; a suit of black crepe meteor, with jaunty empire cutaway coat and draped skirt, and by having the coat lined with gold-colored chiffon you can wear it with the old gold gown, and at other times, the lace bodice of the gown may be worn with the suit. By so doing you can really have three beautiful costumes for the cost of two. As the season advances it becomes more evident that the rich-colored gowns and short black coats are foremost among ultra styles.

Although I have already suggested a black crepe meteor suit, I want to second the fact, as you may be tempted by the brocade and Canton crepes that are so popular. Canton crepe always looks refined and elegant, while the others are apt to become too common by being imitated. Cote de cheval, which looks like silk Bedford cord, is worthy of your consideration, if you wish to expend at least five dollars also used for the material. This silk is also used for the finest afternoon coats.

Season of Blouses.
This is surely a season of blouses! And, even though new styles have been introduced every few weeks, you have no occasion to feel pained, for they are all so different. Lace blouses, which are the latest mode, are certain to reign throughout the summer, because they are so fine and dainty. As these blouses are really transparent—being made of shadow lace—their designers were clever enough to know that just any kinds of corset covers would simply ruin their lovely appearance, and, therefore, made them with cannoles (under bodices) of lace, net and ribbon. The prettiest of these blouses are fashioned with V-front necks, edged with frills of shadow lace, which also continue down the fronts to the waist line. Sometimes these blouses have flat collars and turnback cuffs of white mouseline to give them a tone of richness.

Experiments have shown that the greatest gains in fattening are made by young stock when two to four months old.

It seems curious that not until this year did women realize that white crepe de chine makes the most satisfactory utility blouse. Of course, the styles heretofore did not require this charming silk crepe for their interpretation—even though they would have been better if they had—so we had to wait for the Trotteur modes of 1913 to make us conversant with the fact. These Trotteur styles, which are also known as Debardeur modes—having been copied from the French workmen's shirts—are quite the smartest when not trimmed with anything except cordings of the silk and black silk cravats. The models with slightly high turn-down collar and small revers that form a V-neck is considered the best.

Effective Plaited Styles.
If the new white chiffon blouses have won your admiration, you will not regret a considerable expenditure if you get the effectively plaited styles that have but mere touches of lace, if any trimmings, for those of plain chiffon not only look richer, but they will dry clean more successfully, and be sure to get them with flesh-color chiffon linings.

If you need a rather dressy afternoon coat, as well as an evening wrap and don't feel as though you could afford to get both, may I suggest one of the new beaded wraps that are so appropriate before 6 p. m., as they are thereafter? These wraps, which are most effective when in a just-below hip length and draped in a swathe-like fashion, are of black Brussels net, encrusted with jet, crystal, moonlight or iridescent beads and lined with black chiffon—the fronts and sleeves are finished with narrow ends of black satin or moire. A composite of elegance and simplicity best describes any one of these wraps.

Suit of Taupe Silk.
Among a collection of sheer frocks shown at a Fifth avenue house, which were greatly reduced in price, was an admirable little gown pictured in the illustration. It was a coat and skirt suit of taupe silk cloth with crossed vest of embroidered satin. The blouse which accompanied the suit was of allover lace trimmed with narrow tulle ruffles. There was a large flat collar attached to the blouse which folded over the jacket and formed a collar. The jacket was made with an attached peplum which curved sharply away in front.

Peau de cuir is the name of the new lightweight woolen fabric that is being used for steamer and sports coats. The tone of elegance that this leather-effect material possesses, explains why the London tailors are making it into severely fashioned Raglan styles, with belted backs.

Long and slender quills are the latest note in tailored millinery. And although fashion is perching many of them on the backs of hats, she appreciates that on some styles they look best in the front or at the sides. They are nearly always poised at a decided angle.

Crétonne for Trimmings.
One-piece frocks as well as blouse suits of linen, linene, voile and other much observed summer fabrics have the necessary contrast supplied in trimmings of crétonne, which is constantly growing in favor. In fact, this fad for utilizing crétonne has developed so rapidly that the more daring designers do not hesitate to fashion entire costumes from it, while jackets are everyday occurrences. They are exceedingly effective and will add to the gaiety of fashionable assemblages this summer. In fact, the garden parties of 1913 will be wonderful studies in color, for the green landscape will act as a background to throw into relief all the vivid colorings of the Futurists, the Post-impressionists and other rabid color enthusiasts.

Black and White Kid Gloves.
Black and white gloves are smart. Heavy white stitching shows on the back of black glove kid gloves which have big white rimmed, black centered pearl buttons and which show facings of white kid on the wrist. White street gloves on the other hand show black stitching, a black wrist facing and black rimmed white pearl buttons. Black gloves with a pink frill of white kid at the wrist are also in evidence.

MADERO'S ASSASSIN SHOT TO DEATH

Cardenas Killed Because "He Knew Too Much."

Washington, Sept. 23.—Lieutenant Colonel Francisco Cardenas, who shot President Madero of Mexico on the night of the ride from the palace to the penitentiary in Mexico City, has been murdered at Michoacan, according to reports received at the Carranza headquarters here.

With Cardenas died the last witness of the Madero tragedy. Vice President Pino Suarez died when his chief died; shot as he was shot. The soldiers in the attendant automobile were executed "in the interests of justice," but Cardenas, who commanded the soldiers, was promoted.

Cardenas, a daring, but dangerous figure in the new regime, toppled from his horse as he rode on a mission from Huerta into Michoacan. He was to take charge of the federal troops at that place. He died as Madero, his victim died, with a bullet in his back.

Cardenas, alone of the "trusted" in the government of Huerta, knew the orders that were issued from the palace on the night Madero and Pino Suarez were shot. Perhaps Cardenas knew too much, say the Carranza faction.

The incident has created new worry in administration circles in Washington. In spite of a detailed declaration by Huerta that he will in no way attempt to influence the coming election, the officials of the state department are apprehensive of further trouble in Mexico at any moment.

WILSON READY TO SIGN TARIFF BILL

Expects to Place New Law on Statute Books This Week.

INCOME TAX TAKEN UP

The President Tells Callers Disputed Points Will Be Cleared Up by Saturday.

Washington, Sept. 23.—Disputed points between the senate and house on the tariff bill narrowed down to such chief features as the income tax, the tax on cotton futures and the general administrative provisions.

The Democratic managers expect to send the conference report to the house by Thursday.

President Wilson told callers that his conferences with leaders led him to believe all differences would be smoothed over and he would sign the bill this week. "I've got my pen sharpened," said the president.

Senator Simmons, chairman of the senate finance committee, and Senator Hoke Smith assured President Wilson they expected the bill to be ready for his signature by Saturday.

The last moments of the passage of a tariff measure always offer opportunity for rejection of a conference report and further deliberations upon points which either house may insist. This may delay the bill's becoming a law until next week.

Democratic leaders from the south are said to be agreed on the cotton future tax compromise proposed by Representative Lever and endorsed by Postmaster General Burleson and Senator Hoke Smith. Instead of the high Clarke tax, it proposes a smaller tax on cotton for which the government has fixed standards. The Cotton Exchange men are protesting against the compromise.

Simmons said he had not discussed the cotton future tax with the president, but indicated that the senate managers would not yield to the house on their amendment.

With consideration of the income tax section the senate amendment lowering the minimum exemption from $4000 to $3000, with allowances for dependent wives and children, and larger taxes on great incomes, came up for settlement.

Representative Alexander, chairman of the house merchant marine committee, with Representatives Jones, Virginia; Small, North Carolina, and McGillivuddy, Maine, asked the president to favor an amendment to the bill giving a five per cent discount in duties to imports in vessels built in the United States, no difference where owned.

A house provision for a five per cent discount for goods in American-owned ships was struck out by the senate on the protests of many foreign governments that it was a discrimination in violation of their treaties.

The president did not commit himself, but indicated that if the amendment did not conflict with any treaty rights he would favor it.

SCHMIDT IDENTIFIED

Boyhood Friend of Murderous Priest Calls on Him.

New York, Sept. 23.—Hans Schmidt, the murderer of Anna Amuller, was a priest, and not a layman, who, for his own purposes, as many suspected, got possession of the credentials of a dead priest and masqueraded as one, with the idea in view of having a cloak for his crimes.

This fact was established at the Tombs by Father Francis Markert, a professor in the College of Techny, at Techny, Ill., who identified Schmidt as a boyhood friend and fellow student at Malux, Germany, as the Hans Schmidt who went out into the world as an ordained priest.

Father Markert came from Techny at the request of Father Luke J. Evers, the Catholic chaplain at the Tombs, who has said that he couldn't believe that Schmidt, the priest, until somebody who really knew the latter was able to identify him beyond any possibility of doubt.

"How do you do, Hans?" was the greeting of Father Markert in German. "You know me, do you not?"

"Yes," replied Schmidt. "You're Francis. We gether?"

Then Father Markert asked Schmidt if there was anything he could do for him, to which Schmidt replied that there was nothing, unless to give his best regards to his (Schmidt's) mother. Then they parted.

Offer Wilson a Winter Home.

Washington, Sept. 23.—President Wilson received an offer of a winter home in Columbia, S. C. A delegation from that city told him the house in which he had spent a part of his boyhood and which his mother had originally designed, had been renovated and would be bought by the city, if he would come to Columbia. The president told his visitors it looked as though he would spend the coming winter hard at work at the White House.

It doesn't make any difference now what Cleveland or Washington does in the remaining games. Should the Naps and Washington win every one of their remaining games and the Athletics lose every one of their scheduled games the Mackmen would finish the season one game ahead of their rivals.

DEFEAT CRAZES TWO CANDIDATES

Aspirants For School Controller Now in Hospitals.

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 23.—Defeat at the recent non-partisan primaries has proved too much of a strain for two candidates for school controller in the boroughs of Archbald and Taylor.

John Novak, of Taylor, was taken to Dr. Glinley's private sanitarium in Scranton the day following the primary election. He escaped from his nurse and fled to the roof of the building, clad only in his night gown.

The fire department and the police were summoned to get him back to his ward. His mind had become temporarily deranged, due to a nervous breakdown.

Michael Duffy, a candidate for school controller in the borough of Archbald, was put under restraint, following a wild ride in an automobile through the county. He had armed himself with a revolver and started out in search of men who, he declared, had "robbed him of victory at the polls."

Friends rushed him to a private sanitarium.

He landed on his head and was stunned. Coffey was carried home and put in bed. After half an hour he dressed and walked about town.

Coffey wore shoes several sizes too large. The toe of the right shoe was cut off, but there was no injury to the foot. He declares he is none the worse for his experience.

OLD GORDON'S UMBRELLA

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

James Gordon, who was generally spoken of as old Gordon, lived in the village of Wayne and had got to be sixty-five years old. He had a daughter, who was his housekeeper, and she was engaged to a young carpenter named Henry Billings.

All went well till the old man decided to build a hog pen.

To build a hog pen you must have lumber and nails. Both were to be had in the village, but when that point was reached the old man cried out:

"No, sir-ee! The last pound of nails I bought of Smith he was three nails short, and the last lumber I bought of Jones there were seven knots in one board. I'll show 'em that I'm not to be swindled. Take the horse and buggy and drive over to Acton and get what we want."

It was seven miles to the town named, but Henry took the ancient rig and set off cheerfully. In the back of the buggy and unknown and unnoticed by him was the tragedy. It was an old gingham umbrella. Just how old it was there was no authentic record, but old Gordon had time and again declared it was the veritable rain shedder carried over the head of General Washington when he crossed the Delaware.

Old Gordon wasn't a church member, but he attended the Methodist services regularly and was prompt with his pew rent. On one occasion the minister doubted the age and adventures of that umbrella, and for the next two years he lost the attendance of the owner and $30 a year pew rent.

Henry Billings pursued his way to the town of Acton with all the innocence of an unborn lamb. On arriving there he hitched old Dobbin to a post and went to see about the lumber. A stray cow was wandering about the streets, and the idea came to her to investigate the buggy. There she found the umbrella. She had never tasted gingham, and she took a gingerly bite. It was good. She hauled the article out of the buggy and was cheering the remains of it when Henry returned. Not knowing the presence of the umbrella, he did not chide the cow, nor did he pick up the ribs and handle and carry them back. He drove home whistling and was proceeding to tell what a box pen bargain he had made when the father of his loved one ruminated in the back end of the buggy and cried out:

"Where in smoke is that umbrella?"

"W-w-h-e-r-e u-u-m-b-r-e-l-l-a?"

"My umbrella!"

"I haven't seen it!"

"You are a liar! It was in the back end of the buggy. I always keep it there to keep it from the rats. Where is it?"

"Why, over at Acton I saw a cow chewing the ribs of an umbrella, but it didn't occur to me that—"

"Oh, it didn't!" shouted the old man. "Well, I'm sure tell you that something else will occur to you right here and now! Don't you ever darken my door again!"

Of course young Billings could not force his way into the house against the wishes of the father. Every one predicted an elopement, but none came off. The lovers met at intervals for a minute outside the house, but both thought it better to wait for the old man to wear his grouse out. More than a year had passed, and he showed no sign of giving in, when a tin peddler came along one day who knew Billings and said:

"If you were smart you'd have had the knot tied long ago."

"You know the old man, do you, and how so he is in his ways?"

"I'll bring the old man around as slick as grease if you'll invest $5."

"It's a go!"

The peddler was in Acton the day of the tragedy. He had picked up the handle and ribs of the umbrella, calculating to have a new cover put on. It took him a week, calling from house to house, to find a housewife with a piece of old gingham thrown away in the garret, but he found it and had a cover made of it.

One day the peddler drove up and said to old Gordon:

"I haven't come to ask you to buy hardware, but it's a case of conscience."

"I don't believe it!" was the grouchy reply.

"I stole your old umbrella out of the buggy at Acton."

"By thunder!"

"I am a great admirer of Washington and wanted a souvenir of him, but my conscience won't let me keep what I stole. Here it is."

"By John, but it's her!" exclaimed the old man as he received and inspected it.

"Same one I stole. You can see that there's a 'W' cut into the handle."

"Of course there is. I've seen it a million times. Washington cut it with his own hand that winter at Valley Forge."

"And you'll forgive me?"

"Kinder, but not quite. It was a funny mean trick of yours. Going into the house?"

"I'll step in a minute to see if Sarah don't want a nutmeg grater."

"Then you may tell her that there are three fools in town—you for bringing back the umbrella after you had got away with it; Henry Billings for thinking a cow chewed it up; me for ordering him out of the house. And, say, tell her that if she and Henry are not married within a month she'll be the fourth fool."

Eggs ought to weigh a pound and a half to the dozen or fifty-five pounds net to the thirty dozen eggs.

PAY OF BRITISHERS

Premier Asquith Receives No Salary in That Office.

Assumes Another Portfolio Remuneration From Which Is More Profitable Than Lord Chancellor Gets $55,000 a Year.

London.—Up to date no cabinet minister in this country has threatened to go on the lecture platform on the ground that his official salary is inadequate to his needs, although David Lloyd George recently assured an investigation committee that he was a poor man on the $25,000 a year—or over twice as much as is paid to any member of President Wilson's official family—which he receives as chancellor of the exchequer.

Ministers of the crown are in receipt of salaries and enjoy "perquisites" which must make the mouths of American ministers water if they know about them. One of them draws an actual stipend of $50,000, or as much as the presidency of the United States was worth until a few years ago, while another gets $35,000 a year and fees in addition, which more often than not amount to more than his official pay. Three others live rent free at the expense of the public, and one of these latter, the first lord of the admiralty, has at his disposal besides, a private yacht which costs the British taxpayers something like $50,000 a year to keep up.

If William J. Bryan, for example, instead of being secretary of state for Uncle Sam, had Prime Minister Asquith's job, he would be drawing more than three times his present salary and would also enjoy, real free, an uncommonly comfortable as well as historic official residence.

The premiership of England, it is true, is an unpaid job, the only real requisite in connection with it being its holder's privilege of occupying the famous mansion, 10 Downing street—now the goal of suffragettes and Scotch bailiffs—which often has been described, and perhaps justly as "the most interesting house in the world." Whoever becomes premier when a new administration comes into being, however, seldom contents himself with that office, but takes unto himself also the portfolio of some other minister of the crown. Mr. Dal four before him, that of first lord of the treasury, which carries with it the yearly emolument of $25,000.

Directly next door is 11 Downing street, an infinitely less luxurious and historic but eminently comfortable house, where, rent free again lives the chancellor of the exchequer. It is rather a striking coincidence, by the way, that Lloyd George, who, like W. J. Bryan, has come to be regarded as the tribune and advocate of the "plain people," should, like his distinguished contemporary on the other side of the Atlantic, be the only member of the present cabinet to allege that his official salary is inadequate to his needs.

In the United States there is no exact counterpart of the lord chancellor who, besides acting as speaker of the upper house, is supreme head of the English judiciary, and who draws an annual salary of $50,000. When he retires, moreover, he immediately enters on a life annuity amounting to $25,000 a year. The present holder of this office is Lord Haldane, who was secretary of state for war before his elevation to the woolsack.

Nobody ever has accused the lord chancellor of having a snap. Besides sitting, clad in wig and gown, as speaker of the house of peers he sits as a judge in that house, in the privy council, the court of appeal, and the chancery division of the high court of justice. He has the appointment of all justices of the peace throughout the kingdom, and all the judges of the superior courts except the lord chief justice, who is nominated by the prime minister.

Wanted Dog Hung for Murder.

Montclair, N. J.—Mr. L. H. Forester's pet cat was murdered, seemingly by a dog, whereupon Mrs. Forester rushed into police headquarters here and asked that Snap, a dog owned by a neighbor, be charged with the murder and duly executed. Asked if she knew to a certainty that Snap was the culprit, she answered in the negative, but declared she felt sure Snap killed her cat "because he was sniffing in my yard afterward." The police contended that Snap had a right to sniff and refused to have him haled into court.

Keep a flock of hens, a good cow or two, prepare for a good garden this year, and you won't have to complain of the high cost of living.

A New York dramatic writer tells of an actress of great popularity who is just beginning to be obsessed with the notion that the public holds her to be older than she really is.

The writer was assigned to interview this player. He wished to obtain her views with reference to the state of the drama, a topic whereon the actress did not seem particularly anxious to decant.

"It does not seem to me," gently suggested the interviewer, with a smile, "that I am really ascertaining your opinion. You ought to be frank, since your eyes are gray and—"

"Prematurely so, my dear boy, prematurely so," the actress hastened to assure him.—Judge.

A Frontier of Peace.

With its row of crumbling forts and rusty guns the frontier between Canada and the United States stands as an object lesson to all nations. While it is the longest, it is the safest and securest frontier in the world. Three thousand miles and more of it lie between Passamaquoddy bay and Puget sound, and in all that distance not a shot of a gun points menacingly from either country toward the other. A few small and comparatively ineffective fishery cruisers guard the waterfront, none of which would be of much use in time of war.—St. John Telegraph.
